Message from KFRW President Pamela S. Roberts

Greetings!

Most of you know I am a Christian who journals and reads every day. I find answers to many questions I have when I am reading in the mornings. Not every day but most days. That coupled with walking to one of my favorite spots helps bring me into focus which in return clears my mind of so many things going on today in our society.

I was reading in the book of Ezra before driving to my first visit to WROCK on July 20th. I wrote these words from the text I was reading; "It is not easy to speak up for truth in a society that has become more for uniformity than unity. If we try to offend no one or everyone we cannot

I somehow think that during this process, we often, times lose sight on the purpose for the action being taken. There are many reasons for motivation and each one of us who choose must make decisions whether to act or be still.

In society today, it is difficult to stand up against what the majority believes. However, if you do stand up, be effective. Do not be intimidated to let others know by your work and actions whom you really are."

Bios and resumes can be filled with many accomplishments for the person it is written about.

They also tell a story about the person who takes, action for results of the listed achievements and gives insight to the named person's identity. Most times, these documents are used to introduce someone to an audience who will then applaud because the person has had success.

you may be surprised how many will join you. Unity is standing together for being united. Uniformity is standing for unvaried sameness regardless of character.

How will you be defined? It is your choice.

For God and Country,

Pam

In 2021, the name for this campaign was changed to Lincoln Legacy Circle. For $100, women of the KFRW could be a part of the circle. We had 107 women joined as Charter Members this first year. Events are held annually for those who join this fun group of women. Please join us as we raise money to support our Republican Candidates.
